FINDINGS CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATION OF THE UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE

Pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b) and an order of the District Court, this case has been referred to the United States Magistrate Judge. The findings, conclusions and recommendation of the Magistrate Judge follow:

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff filed an unspecified civil action. He is proceeding pro se and the Court has granted him leave to proceed in forma pauperis.

Plaintiff asks this Court to intervene in two state cases. Both state cases involve child custody issues in cause number 07-16856-CV, 13th Judicial District Court, Navarro County, Texas, and cause number 2007-50897-367, 367th Judicial District Court, Denton County, Texas. Plaintiff claims the state courts have harassed him, have obstructed justice and have denied him due process. He asks this Court to intervene to prevent witness tampering, obstruction of justice and disregard for his due process rights. He also seeks to enjoin all involved state employees from continuing their employment and asks that they be placed on paid suspension.

II. SCREENING

The terms of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2)(B)(i) authorize a federal court to dismiss an action in which the Plaintiff is proceeding in forma pauperis before service if the court determines that the action is frivolous or malicious. Under this standard, a district court may review a complaint and dismiss sua sponte those claims premised on meritless legal theories and those which clearly lack any basis in fact. Denton v. Hernandez, 504 U.S. 25, 31, 112 S.Ct. 1728, 1733 (1992); Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 325, 109 S.Ct. 1827, 1831-32 (1989).

III. DISCUSSION

Plaintiff asks this Court to intervene in his two state cases. A federal court should abstain from exercising jurisdiction in pending state proceedings in which important state interests are implicated and when it is determined that the plaintiff has an adequate remedy under state law. Pennzoil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 481 U.S. 1, 10-11 (1987) (citations omitted). In such cases, the doctrines of equity and comity as discussed in Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971), counsel against federal court intervention.

In Younger, the plaintiff was charged with a criminal violation in state court. The plaintiff sought injunctive and declaratory relief in federal court, arguing the state prosecution violated his First Amendment rights. The district court held the criminal statute was void for vagueness and overbreadth and granted injunctive relief. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that it was improper for a federal court to enjoin a pending state criminal proceeding absent extraordinary circumstances. Id. at 49. The Court stated there was a “longstanding public policy against federal interference with state court proceedings.” Id. at 43-44.

The Younger abstention doctrine has been extended to state civil proceedings that (1) are pending and (2) in which interference from the federal court would implicate an important state interest and (3) the plaintiff has an opportunity to adjudicate his constitutional claims in state court. Pennzoil Co., 481 U.S. at 12-17.

In this case, Plaintiff challenges state court child custody proceedings that are currently pending.¹ Child custody proceedings clearly involve important state interests. See Moore v. Sims, 442 U.S. 415, 434-35 (1979). Further, Plaintiff has an opportunity in state court to litigate his claims of witness tampering, harassment and violations of due process. The Supreme Court acknowledged in Pennzoil Co. that under Article VI of the Constitution, state judges are bound by the federal Constitution and federal law, and further, the Texas Constitution has an “open courts” provision, which guarantees litigants the right to access the state courts. Pennzoil Co., 481 U.S. at 15-16. Plaintiff’s complaint should therefore be dismissed under the Younger abstention doctrine.

RECOMMENDATION

The Court recommends the complaint be dismissed as frivolous pursuant to the Younger abstention doctrine.

Signed this 23rd day of June, 2008.
